      Hi, my family and friends, I am now starting my advanced web programming course. Next, I will learn more about web programming. In addition, I will have a deeper understanding of the PHP language and its application and I thought it would be fun. In the future, I believe I can create my own PHP page and skillfully use PHP. That's what I want for myself. So I hope I can learn more about how to use PHP and practice my skills more in class. It would be better if I could learn about PHP's job prospects and the social aspects of it

      In my opinion, the course policies is great, It's very clear what we might be dealing with. And I think the response is very reasonable, I like a lot of dropped homework and dropped quiz parts. Because we're bound to make mistakes when we do homework and quizs, this policy gives us the opportunity to do better.

      My goal is to get an A, so I will start my weekly tasks as early as possible. Take notes of what I have learned and ask questions about what I don't know. Take each assignment and quiz seriously. In the spare time to learn more about PHP and other web programming knowledge.
